I love my Bialetti Moka maker. It allows me to really celebrate my coffee, to enjoy it more, and even to customize it. It gives me time to focus for a moment, to relax and enjoy.

Just like coffee, I really enjoy music. I think it deserves to be celebrated more, it deserves more attention. And so I decided it was time to buy my own turntable. At that point in time I was familiar with TheHouseOfMarley already, and I experienced their quality first hands. Non-sustainable audio products are not an option for me anymore, therefore I bought the Stir it up Wireless turntable.

I bought the Bluetooth version in a bundle with the Get together Duo speaker. This way, my Turntable automatically connects with my speakers every time I turn it on, and I don't need to by an extra amplifier.

The Stir it up Wireless turntable comes with several convenient features, such as:

- Headphone jack
- Bluetooth button
- Fine tuning options for the arm
- Variable speed (2 stage)
- Manual volume knob
- Speaker cable ports
- Option to connect it to a Laptop and copy your Vinyls
- Shock absorbing silicon feet (recycled)

In essence

The fit and finish is world class and the product looks great.

The needle needs an upgrade at some point in the future, since it is really noisy. The turntable is easy to set up, since the manual leaves no questions at all, and the price is amazing.

This all builds up on a sustainable mindset with the spirit of your favorite tracks in mind.
